Disposing of E-Waste

E-waste is consumer electronic equipment that is no longer wanted, including computers, printers, televisions, cell phones, fax machines, stereos, electronic games, and dry-cell batteries. These electronics may contain lead, copper, and other heavy metals or potentially toxic substances.

That is why it is critical to reduce e-waste by only buying what is needed, reusing electronics that still work and recycling electronics at the end of their useful life.

In the City of Rosemead, Consolidated Disposal will pick up any amount of e-waste. Place items near or on to of recycling bin so it is not missed by the driver.
